RICHARD GODDARD, AND WIFE, ALDBOURN CHURCH, WILTS
(INSCRIPTION IN FACSIMILE)

Goddard Brass in Aldbourn Church.

THE Goddard brass, a plate of which is given in the present number of our Magazine, was recently discovered in the Upham Aisle of Aldbourn Church in this county, on removing some decayed pew floors. From a comparison of dates, as well as from the style of the dress, and the pedigree of the Goddard Family supplied in "Burke's Landed Gentry," it is, most likely, a memorial of Richard Goddard of Upham, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Walrond, Esq., of Aldbourn, and had by her three sons and one daughter. There are "matrices" of other smaller brasses, probably shields of arms, at the foot of the slab, but as they are lost, no evidence can be obtained from arms in support of the above opinion.

Against the wall immediately above the place where this brass was discovered, is a monument to the memory of a Goddard, his wife, three sons and one daughter. At the top are the usual Goddard arms, quartering either what is a second coat of Goddard (granted in 1536 to William Goddard, and mentioned in Burke's Armoury, as the arms of Goddard of London, and East Wood-Hay, co. Hants); or, it is the record of a Goddard marriage with an heiress of the same name, but of a different family. Other shields of arms, once on this monument, are now quite obliterated; and the monument itself bears no inscription. The figures of father, mother, three sons and daughter, are kneeling in order.

The Rev. Francis Goddard, Vicar of Hilmarton, who has with considerable labour collected all particulars relative to Goddard pedigree, says that "The monument with figures at Aldbourn is believed to be that of Thomas Goddard, his second wife, and their children: his will dated 1609." The style of dress would decide
